The Great Trials of History

TRIAL OF COUNT VON ARNIM

A trial which attracted the attention of the whole European continent, and in which von Bismarck strongly figured, was that of Count von Arnim. This man was once the most cherished friend of the Iron Chancellor and had held many important positions in the diplomatic service. This friendship lasted for many years until the Chancellor thought that he was allying himself too strongly with the party in opposition. At first Bismarck thought of sending him politely to exile in Constantinople, but this, for some reason, was abandoned, and soon von Arnim was left without a position or employment.

Von Arnim then descended to a depth which was intolerable for a member of the diplomatic staff of Europe. He published, or allowed to be published, despatches in Vienna, which he had written in Rome, discrediting Bismarck and trying to show that he himself had had more foresight in the papal question than had his leader. The German government could not positively prove that Arnim had written the despatches, but directed his successor at Paris to search the archives and see that all the documents that were supposed to be there were in the right place. The result of the search was that a large number of them were found to be missing.

When brought before the tribunal, Arnim professed that the papers were his own as they were personal, but declaring, however, that he would soon bring them out in the interest of his own defense. On October 4, von Arnim was arrested and his country seat near Stettin was searched by a cortege from Berlin. The body of soldiers could not find any papers in Arnim's house although they searched carefully and he was then carried off and committed to the Berlin Metropolitan prison. On account of his health he was released on bail, but was re-arrested shortly afterward and confined to his house. His trial began on December 9, and lasted until the fifteenth. The charges were advanced by Dr. Tesendorf, the public prosecutor. The

DARKEN GRAY HAIR, LOOK YOUNG, PRETTY

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens So Naturally That Nobody Can Tell

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

CASE OF ESPEE IS FIRST TO COME UP

Hearing in Three Cent Fare Case Opens With Submission of Evidence by Commission's Accountant.

The submission of numerous accounts and a large amount of data favoring the proposed three-cent fare order and the examination of William Sangster, accountant for the corporation commission, occupied the entire first day's session in the passenger fare hearing before the corporation commission yesterday. The hearing began at 10 o'clock and continued until 3:30, with a recess at noon of an hour and a half.

The evidence submitted related to the apportionment of charges and operating expenses as divided between freight and passenger traffic on the Southern Pacific, and as to bases of calculation in the matter of road maintenance. Briefs were submitted showing the rate per mile charged by the various railroads operating in Arizona, and other states, both on branch and main lines.

The supreme court room was well filled, both morning and afternoon, with railroad officials, attorneys and accountants, representing all the railroads operating in the state. Accountant Sangster was on the stand both morning and afternoon and his examination will be continued today.

The court itself, before which the prisoner was tried, was the tribunal of the city of Berlin.

The count was accused of not having restored soon enough one set of official papers, which he ultimately sent to the foreign office; of withholding papers belonging to the office, which he owned he had in his possession, and having taken from Paris another set of papers of which he would give no account. He was also charged with having papers which he owned were in his possession which he would not give up and of having the papers which he would give no account of for the express purpose of furthering his political ends and for the use of publishing them.

On the last two charges, the tribunal held that there was not enough evidence to show him guilty on a criminal charge. The court then made a long statement, tracing the different disciplinary and legal offenses. Von Arnim was clearly guilty of a breach of discipline, but there was a great difference between that and being legally guilty. In regard to the papers which he refused to give up, the court upheld him in that action. If a letter is sent from the foreign office to a diplomatic agent merely censuring him personally, the letter is clearly his, as it is private guidance. If a despatch is also sent with the letter it depends on how much personal and how much state matter make up the contents. If Count Von Arnim thought that they were mostly personal rebukes, censuring his conduct, he had a right to them, but even in case that he had overestimated the personality of the letters, it showed that he had a bona fide reason for withdrawing them.

The only charge that was at last left, was that of the despatches about ecclesiastical matters, which Arnim held he thought would not be wanted at Paris, as his successor was a Catholic, and so took them with him to Berlin, and then to Carlsbad. In this, the court ruled, that even if he were right in bringing them from Paris to Berlin, he had no right to take them with him to Carlsbad, and he could easily discriminate that they were belonging to the foreign office. He was thus found guilty of removing public documents, and was accordingly sent to prison for three months.

From this sentence both Arnim and the public prosecutor made an appeal with the result that the sentence was increased to nine months. The count escaped imprisonment by leaving the country, and at Zurich published a pamphlet in which he attempted to show that the attacks upon him had been made through the personal jealousy of Bismarck. For this he was accused of treason, insult to the emperor and libelling Bismarck, and in his absence was sentenced to five years' penal servitude. This sentence, however, was never executed, for he never returned to Germany, and died May 19, 1881.

Tomorrow—Trial of General Schuyler.

JAPANESE SPINNING-MILLS

The Shanghai Spinning company, owned by the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha, proposed to double the present capital of 1,000,000 taels, the increase to be applied to the construction of a new mill at Yangtsepo, while the company already has two mills. The number of spindles operated in 1913 was 64,800, which will be increased to 129,600. The spinning mills in China which have decided on extensions are the ones owned by Jardine Matheson & Co., the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha and the Nishiki Wata Kaisha, while the Mie Spinning company of Nagoya has decided to establish one also.

The Teikoku Seima Kabushiki Kaisha (Imperial Flax company, Limited), has factories at Dembocho, Nishinagun, Osaka Fu, as well as others at Nikko, Kanuma, Sapporo and Otsu, which handle hemp, flax and jute. They make some coarse linens, and also a small but increasing amount of the jute burlaps that are used for covering bales of cotton yarn and cloth.
